

County housing board proposing services for aged

"The extent of federal participation in public housing for 1974 has not been clarified to date. It has been subjected to many changes that have not been completed at the federal level," Edward V. Foley, executive director of the Madison County Housing Authority, Madison, reported today.

"With the possibility of less or no subsidy funds for the next fiscal year, the Madison County Housing Authority has spent much time in reviewing the projected 1974 budget, with indications that it will be a deficit budget. "Our authority has looked to all sources for additional funding. "Illinois law permits housing authorities to expand in other areas of housing, such as shelter care, nursing homes and moderate income housing for the elderly. These facilities can either be purchased or constructed. "A survey is now under way to consider either or both methods of acquiring such housing," Foley told the Press-Record. "The income generated by these projects would assist the Madison County Housing Authority with its operating expenses. "In order to take advantage of this housing for the elderly, the Authority has formed a non-profit corporation to negotiate further plans. Thus, we have joined other Illinois housing authorities in a new concept in housing operations." He added, "The Madison County Housing Authority is now in the first phase of a $1,682,000 modernization program to update its ten projects of 852 units in Madison County. "A grant in this amount for modernization has been approved by the Chicago Regional Office of the U. S. Housing and Urban Development Department."

Construction resumes, new talks planned tomorrow

By GARY SCHNEIDER
Press-Record Staff Writer

Construction resumed here a week after a federal judge issued a restraining order Monday halting a half-day strike of Operating Engineers Local 520 of Mitchell.

A hearing on the preliminary injunction is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. Monday in federal court in Peoria.

"Work should continue without interruption through July 9 (Monday)," according to a statement issued by the Southern Illinois Builders Association, representative of area contractors in the negotiations with the Operating Engineers.

A Local 520 spokesman today agreed with the SIBA statement, saying, "Everyone will be at work as usual today. Everything is in full swing and everyone who was working before will be working today."

Operating engineers operate heavy motorized equipment. Local 520 has 1,800 members in 16 counties, including Madison.

The union struck Monday under a clause in its contract which, Local 520 contends, allows a strike by the union or a lockout by the contractors if no agreement has been reached in negotiations by July 1.

The present contract does not expire until Dec. 31.

A negotiating session between SIBA, the Southern Illinois Contractors' Association (SICA) and the union is scheduled for tomorrow morning.

The SIBA had requested federal mediation. But Theodore H. Dressel, Local 520 business agent, said today, "We have not invited the federal mediator."

The workers, who currently receive $5.33 an hour in wages plus $1.22 an hour in fringe benefits, are asking an additional 50 cents an hour in wages and 2½ cents in fringe benefits, he said.

"I do not believe any of the requests we have made are unreasonable," Dressel said, adding that the increases are well within the 5.9% Phare II guidelines and that similar increases have been granted operating engineers in St. Louis, Springfield and other locations.

"I believe the contractors are extending negotiations in the hope Phare IV will let them cut completely," he said.

Any agreement reached now will have to be approved by the Construction Industry Stabilization Council in Washington before becoming effective, Dressel explained.

The SIBA last week filed a charge with the National Labor Relations Board in St. Louis alleging that the local was refusing to bargain. "We feel there is no truth to that. We feel we are negotiating in good faith," Dressel said. The two sides last met on June 27.

The strike threatened to halt work on the new Granite City High School North and did hinder work on Route 203 improvements, plus additions and improvements at Granite City Steel Co. and other construction jobs.

At GC/HS/N, pickets were put at the entrance drives at 8:45 a.m. Monday and were withdrawn at 11 a.m. by the injunction. Contractors had said they would halt work at noon Monday and honor the picket lines, but continued work when the pickets left.

"We did not lose any time on the job," Tully A. Heubner, director of buildings and grounds for the school district, commented.

"We were not at a state of construction where operating engineers were required, but they will be needed soon." At GC Steel, the strike caused lost time on the rebuilding of coke oven batteries and installation of an air pollution scrubber at the sinter plant. Steel production operations were not hampered.

City budget requests exceed $5.7 million

By HARRY BARNES
Press-Record Staff Writer

A 1973-74 Granite City budget totaling $5,707,000 for all purposes—the highest in the city's history—was proposed for adoption by the City Council Monday night.

The new appropriation bill, which includes $727,100 in items to be financed with federal funds, is to be prepared in ordinance form to be placed on first reading, possibly in a special meeting next week. State law requires that the city adopt and obtain legal publication of the budget by July 31.

The $5.7 million budget figure agreed upon by council members after nearly two hours' session of appropriation items Monday night, includes the $727,100 in revenue sharing items, $3,025,350 in the general fund and $1,051,081 in non-general fund items which include the aerial maintenance, public library, fire and police pensions and sewage treatment plant accounts.

City officials contended that because the cost of sewer break repairs—estimated in the budget at $500,000—will be reimbursed by federal flood disaster funds, that item should be considered as separate from the general fund.

This theory would reduce the general fund appropriation to $3,125,350 on the basis of figures considered in Monday's meeting.

The overall budget figure, including the revenue sharing items, is an increase of $1,726,700 over last year's total operating budget of $3,980,300 which did not include revenue sharing expenditures.

Exclusive of the revenue sharing items, the new budget would total $4,980,350 for all regular operating accounts, an increase of $800,000 over that of last year.

City Treasurer Paul Rutledge said that the increase in the general fund—assuming the $500,000 for repair of sewer breaks is considered as a separate item—will approximate a half million dollars.

The budget figure approved Monday night for preparation of the appropriation ordinance is subject to adjustment in the final budget draft.

Several aldermen pointed out in Monday night's meeting that the appropriation for the sewer treatment plant did not yet include an estimated $30,000 for installation of chlorination facilities at the city's primary sewage treatment plant.

R. E. Robertson, chairman of the pollution plant committee, said during the discussion at the city "is moving along so well in its treatment plant project that we may be able to get along without it."

Other aldermen noted, however, that the interim chlorination facilities have been ordered by the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency, and that the city's federal grant for construction of the secondary sewage treatment plant could hinge on the city's compliance.

The proposed budget in its original form, submitted to the council by Alderman Gerald Farney, chairman of the council's finance committee, called for an overall total of $5,494,630, including revenue sharing items of $827,100, but the addition of $200,000 to the revenue sharing items, $8,829 for an additional employee in the street department, and $3,880 for land rental brought the figure to the $5.7 million total.

The $200,000 was added to the revenue sharing budget on a motion by Alderman Clyde Boyd that the amount be established for resurfacing city streets, along with repair of curbs and gutters. Later, the council approved another motion by Boyd that specifications be prepared for this work and that the city clerk be authorized to call bids.

Highlighting new items in this year's budget are provisions for an increase of seven men in the Police Department, two men in the Fire Department and the hiring of a city engineer and an assistant to the engineer.

Gov. Walker assails 'waste' of tax funds

Governor Daniel Walker in an aerial tour of the state Tuesday assailed Republican legislative leaders for "gigantic waste of the taxpayers' money" during the session which ended Monday evening.

His flying visits to Chicago, Rockford, Moline, Peoria, Springfield, Springfield and Champaign are a pattern he has repeated often as a means of presenting his policies "directly to the people."

The independent Democrat has sought to picture himself as "the friend of the taxpayers" and took a similar stand in his visit to this and other regions Tuesday.

He talked of "the biggest waste gap between income and spending in recent history," estimating projected spending at $332 million more than anticipated revenue.

"If I were to sign all these bills, all the sales tax would have to be increased an additional two cents to seven cents—the highest in the nation—or the personal income tax would have to be increased from 2½% to 4%," the governor asserted.

"If we were to take into account all funds, including bond funds, the corresponding goes up $1 billion," he had suggested a $7 billion state budget for July 1973-June 1974.

While pleading that "we will not raise taxes and we will not spend that billion dollars," Gov. Walker did not say whether he will sign a tax relief measure, cutting the sales tax by a half-cent on each dollar of sales. He estimated the state tax cut would cost the state $168 million.

He had preferred either his own plan for a revised income tax exemption or some other Democratic-sponsored tax reduction.

Instead, the GOP-developed sales tax slash is the only such legislation scheduled to be for, we did to him.

The governor predicted that "you'll hear screams from the Republican leaders" during the next few weeks as he exercises his veto power to reduce appropriations bills.

Walker said he detected a "get Dan Walker" theme in the 1973 legislative session.

His decision to present no substantive legislative programs, particularly during the early portions of the six-month session, was prompted by awareness that his proposals would get nowhere with the Republican majorities, he said Tuesday.

"I think the best way for me to proceed during the session was the way I did," the governor remarked.

He assailed the General Assembly for cutting $200,000 from the amount he requested for the state Ethics Board.

"We'll keep the beard going somehow, and we will get ethics legislation, even if it means a knock-down, drag-out fight between me and the Republican leadership," House Democrats killed a group of bills described as leading to the most far-reaching election reform in Illinois history, including campaign gift disclosure.

New apportionment of Maryville Road costs

Granite City's share of the cost in a city-county project to extend Maryville Road from Pontoon Road southward to Highway 162 has been increased to an estimated $900,000, a factor that may endanger the city's participation in the proposal, City Council members were informed Monday night.

The long-standing Maryville Road project, originated in August 1970 as a $2 million project financed by motor fuel tax funds from Granite City and Madison County, is being engineered by the county. Plans have progressed to the point where acquisition of right-of-way could begin soon.

The new cost estimate of $900,000, increased from the city's original requirement of $320,000 as its share of construction costs, came from Alderman Clyde Boyd of the council's street and alley committee who said he "can't see where we can get that kind of money, even in a subsequent period of time."

Boyd told the council that he and members of the street and alley committee met with county highway officials to discuss planning of the road-way improvement and were informed that the city's share of the cost would be "900,000 plan" and that the figure does not include the cost of right-of-way which the city would need to provide.

"We remembered that when this project was initiated, it was an 80-20% deal, with the city furnishing about 20% of the cost," Boyd said. "But county officials said they did not know how we arrived at such a figure."

The city in September 1970 approved an appropriation of $300,000 as its share of the project, with $200,000 of the amount to be used for construction costs and the remaining $100,000 for right-of-way.

"With the cost now raised by $400,000, we would be paying about 35% of the cost, Boyd said, noting that the city's income from state motor fuel taxes would be insufficient to meet such cost "even over the period of time that it will take to acquire right-of-way and to build the roadway."

Alderman Walter Nunn told the aldermen that "if you go for this, you can kiss everything else goodbye. We owe for Namekott Road and we owe for Johnson Road and there are other motor fuel tax jobs pending."

Mayer Paul Schuler noted, however, that "We need something out there."

He suggested the council refer the matter back to its motor fuel tax engineers to determine if some revisions are possible that would trim the cost. The council acted on this suggestion.

The proposed highway would be a four-lane roadway extending from the present four-lane

Maryville Road that now ends at Pontoon Road, and would provide a highly improved traffic route skirting the eastern edge of the city.

The new portion of Maryville Road would extend all most directly southward from the point where it now ends at Pontoon Road, following a path that would encompass the presently paved section of Maryville Road, from Stratford Lane to St. Clair Avenue.

Levee trustees agree to retain single district

An Illinois Supreme Court decision that held illegal legislation splitting the East Side Levee District along the county line will not be appealed. William M. Ebersold and Russell Robinson said today.

The local trustees said their attorney, Horace Calvo of Granite City, was instructed to notify the St. Clair County levee trustees that no appeal will be filed, clearing the way for the district to sell tax anticipation warrants and meet a back payroll of more than $170,000.

In other action today, the board voted to bar President Romel Wilson from hiring any employees, and voted that authority in the entire board.

County residents buy $516,510 in bonds

Madison county residents purchased a total of $516,510 in Series E and H United States Savings Bonds in May, according to Henry D. Karandjoff, Granite City, volunteer county chairman of the Savings Bonds Committee.

Sales in the state of Illinois total $2,533,797, according to Clarence S. Sochowski, north central regional director, Department of the Treasury, Savings Bonds Division. This is 8.6% above May 1972.

Illinois purchases in May accounted for 5.3% of the national total of $53,000,000, and in the first five months 48.4% of the Illinois 1973 dollar goal of $417,400,000 was achieved.

Vehicle title processing cost is being cut in half

The state of Illinois will save $100,000 on motor vehicle titles processed during the coming fiscal year, Michael J. Howlett, secretary of state, said today.

The savings will come through a change in the printing and processing of application forms, according to Howlett.

"We have determined that a less expensive method could be used," he explained.

Improvements planned include an addition to the town hall, a larger dog holding pound, creation of a park fund, an environmental cleanup project including trash and limb pickup and street and gutter cleaning.

Governor moving toward more traditional procedures after 6 months of controversy

By KEN WATSON
Capitol News Service
Springfield — Controversy, confusion and lack of traditional leadership in the affairs of the state — this is a Statehouse summation of the first six months of Gov. Dan Walker's administration.

A half-year after taking his oath of office in the Capitol lawn, Walker cannot claim a single major accomplishment in the view of many.

Even his widely trumpeted claim of bringing "economy" into the governmental operation is pretty much of a farce. Scrutiny of budget requests by legislative committees has revealed little hard evidence of pruning.

The chief result of Walker's job-shifting has been to push the morale of state employees to the lowest level in years.

No governor in modern times has had a worse working relationship with the Illinois legislature. Nor in Walker's case is the trouble confined to the opposition party. His relations with his two Democratic, especially the leadership, has been spotty at best.

The governor-legislature relationship verged on the ludicrous as the session neared its end.

After virtually ignoring lawmakers for five months, Gov. Walker charged into a frenzy of legislative activity — including unprecedented appearances at Democratic caucuses.

Also after repeatedly spurning and attacking the "old politics," the governor began negotiating with the old master, Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, on the Chicago mass transit-tax issue.

Gov. Walker had troubles, too, as an administrator.

He left a highly-paid executive post at Montgomery Ward to enter politics, but his performance as the state's chief executive has made many at the Statehouse wonder why Ward's paid him so much.

He has had a series of troubles with key appointments and his official "family" is still far from firm with half of his first year spent.

The unresolved Angelo affair — Illinois' "little Watergate" — still looms as a giant shadow over the administration.

After six months, Walker remains embattled by not completely unbeloved. He is attacking less and inclining more frequently toward traditional political and legislative compromise.

Dan Walker, his critics concede, still retains a strong base of grassroots popularity. But there are some subtle signs that this, too, may be eroding.

One of Illinois' most knowledgeable and successful politicians confided to us: "Walker's beginning to lose the business and professional people around the state. When these go, the rest of the people follow them sooner or later."

Gov. Walker may be getting the message.

Police, fire tests scheduled Saturday

Examinations will be conducted Saturday for applicants who wish to become probationary firemen or policemen in Granite City. The deadline for applying to take the test has passed.

The prospective policemen will take the test at 9 a.m. Saturday and hopeful fire department candidates will be examined at 1 p.m. Both tests will be conducted at the VFW Hall, 311 Street and Washington Avenue.

MORE ABOUT

City budget

$64,522 in salaries for seven additional police officers was challenged by some aldermen. The request was defended by Chief of Police Ronald Vetter who told council members that his department is confronted with steadily increasing demands and is now substantially undermanned.

The original budget draft set up $40,800 for four new firemen, but this was reduced to two additional men on a motion by Boyd, chairman of the fire and water committee. Boyd said his committee intended to request employment of only two men during the current fiscal year. This action cut that appropriation in half.

The budget provides $20,000 for the salary of a fulltime city engineer, and $6,000 as salary for an assistant to the engineer. In recent years the city has been without a fulltime engineer, using the services of consulting engineers on a fee basis.

The city has advertised for a city engineer and was to conduct interviews with several applicants this week, according to Mayor Paul Schuler.

Increased salary figures are contained for all departments in the proposed new budget, involving pay raises based on 6% of total base pay which were approved by the council in other action Monday night.

Alderman Roy Poulos sought to eliminate a $1,000 salary figure for Mayor Schuler as liquor control commissioner, but his motion lost for lack of a second.

For the Fire Department, the proposed new budget projects total expenditures of $66,745 in the general fund and $176,000 in revenue sharing funds for a total of $242,745. Actual Fire Department expenses last year were $217,315.

Revenue sharing projections for the Fire Department include $100,000 for construction of a new Nametok fire station and an additional $20,000 to acquire land for such a station. Also included is a new summer at a projected cost of $45,500, while the general fund portion of the budget provides $40,300 for payment of a new truck delivered several weeks ago.

Budget items for the Street Department include $291,359 in general fund expenditures and $106,000 in

Record Crowd of more than 12,000 views fireworks display at park

Perhaps the largest crowd to witness a Fourth of July fireworks display in the Quad-City area gathered at 9 o'clock last night at Wilson Park and warmly applauded the colorful pyrotechnic show presented by the Granite City Park District.

Harold E. Brown, superintendent of GC parks, said various sources estimated last night's crowd between 12,000 and 14,000 persons.

Total attendance during the five-day festival, including spectators at the men's and women's softball tournaments, is estimated at 25,000 to 30,000.

Brown cited excellent weather conditions throughout the Fourth of July celebration, plus revenue sharing fund costs, for a total of $497,358. Actual expenditures by the Street Department during the last fiscal year totaled $274,152.

Revenue sharing items for that department provide for the purchase of a new tail gate spreader, two chipping machines, three new trucks, a new street sweeper, a high light, a concrete breaker, air compressor and a crawler trailer with front end loader.

Police Department expenditures are budgeted at $682,892 in the general fund and $31,000 in the revenue sharing fund to provide for purchase of seven new cars. Actual Police Department costs last year were $580,021.

Expenditures for the sewage treatment plant are budgeted at $355,651, which compares with $247,762 in actual expenditures last year. Principal increases for the treatment plant include an item of $81,000 for purchase of chemicals and chlorine, compared to actual expenditures of $15,259 last year, and a new item of $40,000 for consulting engineers.

Total cost for maintenance of sewers is set at $88,213 which includes the $800,000 cost project for repair of sewer breaks, and $150,000 in revenue sharing funds for drainage improvements in areas yet to be developed.

The $150,000 for drainage was inserted in the budget after the council approved a motion by Robertson providing the appropriation in an earlier meeting.

a one-day festival in mid-week, among factors contributing to the excellent turnout.

Folding chairs, blankets and camp stools, evident in the hundreds as the show starting time drew close, were quickly equaled by standees who lined the exhibition area by the thousands.

Many observers chose to remain in relative comfort far back from the immediate display clearing, seated on lawn chairs along Fehling Road and State Street and at the rear of Granite City High School, where the brilliant aerial bursts were equally as spectacular as close in.

2 Reilly Tar employees amass 85 years service

Mrs. Raymond (Vera) Scott and Ernest E. Roulund, both long-time employees of the Reilly Tar & Chemical Corp., who accumulated a total of 85 years service, were honored at a retirement dinner party at the Round Table Restaurant, Collinsville.

A cocktail and social hour was enjoyed before dinner was served to many guests, including Peter C. Reilly, chairman of the board of Reilly Tar & Chemical, from Indianapolis, Ind., and George Posen, division sales manager for the corporation, from Cleveland, Ohio.

Both Mrs. Scott, who has been office manager and secretary for 35 years, and Roulund, regional sales manager with the company a total of 47 years, retired June 30.

For the past eight months, the two have been employed in the Hazelwood, Mo. sales office. Both are residents of Granite City.

To commemorate the occasion and in appreciation of past services, the retirees were presented with numerous gifts by the Reilly Corporation, plant supervisors, office personnel and other guests.

Employees attending from the Granite City plant and office were K. J. Morrison, manager, Paul Gauen, plant superintendent, had difficulty keeping up with customers' requests for hot dogs, shrimp, tacos, fish sandwiches and cool drinks.

Freak windstorm at park wrecks shelter

A freak windstorm at 6:30 a.m. Wednesday demolished Shelter No. 1 in Wilson Park, located near the tennis courts on Fehling Road, and left the immediate area strewn with tree branches, some four to five inches in diameter. Harold E. Brown, park superintendent, said today.

The park official said the 28-foot open steel structure, valued between $450 and $500, was literally "picked up and put around a tree," according to a witness who had arrived at the park at the early hour to reserve the shelter for a family picnic.

No damage was caused to any of the temporary construction stands or midway rides at the Fourth of July festival site, leading Brown to theorize that a strong gust of wind probably dropped down at the Fehling Road point. Smaller tree limbs were noted at other spots throughout the park, however.

Brown said a local resident and his family had vacated the shelter and returned to their car when the rain started about 6:30 a.m. They had just entered the car when something picked the thing up and put it against a tree," the man informed the park officer. No one was in the structure at the time.

The seven passengers aboard the boat, all from the St. Louis area, were taken to the Venice boat ramp by an unidentified man in a fishing boat who heard their calls for help. The group went to the Venice police station and telephoned the United States Coast Guard who found the cabin cruiser at 12:55 a.m. today sunk one-half mile south of Eads Bridge.

Concrete glue fills low spot

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service

Q. I would appreciate some help with a problem I have endured for years. The man who installed our concrete patio at the rear of our house left a one-half to three-fourths inch deep. The slab is about four feet thick. I am wondering if some of the new epoxy materials could be used to fill the low area. Can you recommend some help? — Mrs. Hazel D.S., Pickerington, Ohio.

A. This low place can be filled by using a concrete glue. First, brush the area, after it has been cleaned, with the concrete glue, then wait until the material becomes tacky and apply a new surface consisting of a 60-pound bag of concrete topping, mixed with the recommended amount of water, plus adding one pint of concrete glue. Be sure the area is not only clean but dry before painting with the concrete glue. It may take more than one bag of the mixture, depending on how large a fill is needed.

Q. My black top driveway is about six years old and needs something to preserve it. Is there any way this can be done inexpensively? Contractors want to resurface the driveway completely. However, there are few, if any cracks, and I feel if left another year, serious damage may be done. — N.B.Y., Chicago.

A. A dressing for black top driveways is available at dealers in asphalt products. To repair cracks, patch holes, and an instant waterproofing material is available at many garden supply centers, as well as at asphalt product dealers. This is easy to use and it requires no elaborate heating or rolling equipment.

Q. We are thinking of having a new roof put on our house. Which is the best? The present composition shingles are put on over wood shingles. Is it best to take off the composition shingles and then re-roof over the wood shingles? The new roof will be composition shingles. — Lloyd B.P., Fresno.

A. It depends on the condition of the wood shingles after the composition cover has been removed. I would recommend having a reliable roofing firm inspect the roof and advise you. Tearing off the present composition shingles may leave the original wood shingles in bad shape, in which case all should be removed before new roofing is installed. However, if the present surface of composition shingles is in fair shape, you could apply the new roof over both layers of composition and wood shingles, provided your roof structure is strong enough to hold the added weight. These are the reasons you need an expert roofer to make a personal inspection.

Grace Baptist, located at 2800 Edwards St., has maintained an average Sunday School attendance of 496 for the year, placing it as one of the five largest Southern Baptist Schools in the State of Illinois.

State budget to be cut by veto method

The reduction veto power granted by the 1970 Illinois Constitution is expected to be utilized by Gov. Daniel Walker in considering the higher education appropriations enacted by the General Assembly on Monday.

University operating budgets totaling $686 million, endorsed by the Illinois Board of Higher Education, have forecast service cuts of up to 35% due to the legislature's failure to provide funds for the transit system.

House Speaker W. Robert Blair (R, Park Forest) has sponsored a plan for a six-county regional transit authority in the Chicago area.

Chicago Democrats have indicated support for both the six-county proposal and a statewide sales cut; the two topics were linked because the half-cent was to be restored in the Chicago area to provide transit funds.

However, on June 26, Chicago Democrats added a public utility tax to the regional authority bill, and general support for the transit aid evaporated.

The sales tax cut has passed both houses by more than the three-fifths margin needed to override a veto; but if there is a veto, it is uncertain whether Chicago legislators will continue to support the tax reduction.

Several alternatives on jr. college service

Quad-City advocates of establishing junior college service, having met a June 30 deadline to initiate steps toward a new district, are continuing to consider other possibilities.

Action to join another district, such as Lewis and Clark at Godfrey or Belleville Area College at Belleville, also could be taken during the summer or fall, through November, unless a special election on a new district has taken place.

Petitions filed with the Illinois Junior College Board call for formation of the Southwest Junior College District in the Venice, Madison and Granite City school districts, with tax rate ceilings of 15 cents for education and five cents for library.

Benefit dance Sunday to aid Lowe family

Federal property management and disposal revised

The General Services Administration has announced a major reorganization of its property management and disposal functions and the establishment of a new Office of Preparedness. The changes went into effect on July 1.

Arthur F. Sampson, GSA administrator, said the actions are designed to streamline agency operations along functional lines. "We expect these changes will cut tape and allow us to use existing resources more efficiently."

Sampson said the GSA Property Management and Disposal Service will be abolished and its functions transferred to existing GSA offices. The new Office of Preparedness will be transferred to GSA's Public Buildings Service, Sampson said.

A benefit dance to aid the Ronald Lowe family will be held at the American Legion Post 307 on Broadway in Venice from 8 p.m. Sunday until 1 a.m. Monday. The public is invited to attend.

The Lowe family was involved in a May 26 auto accident in which their 6-year-old daughter, Michelle, was killed and the father and a 9-month-old daughter, Melissa, were seriously injured.

Guest artists at the benefit dance will be Rich Landers, whose recording "Sad Situation" is being used on television stations as background music for the dance's promotion; the Country Strings with Bobby Burnett; Don Lucas, Glen Warren and the Country Gamblers with Marie Michele and other recording groups.

Melissa was released this week from the hospital, but still under a physician's care. Dr. Frank B. Dionea has donated his services to assist the family, it was learned.

The baby, who is with her mother at the Kirkpatrick Homes, is recuperating from brain surgery. A rocking chair is needed by the mother, the family reported.

More musicians also are needed for the benefit dance. Local musicians wishing to volunteer their services are asked to contact Flo Lelner at 237-0778. Music and artists are being furnished by Musicians Local 717.

Fifty-five area merchants have donated prizes to be awarded at the dance. Firms donating gifts and services are the Granite City School of Beauty Culture, Marilyn's House of Fashion, Franklin Union, Trailers, Western Auto, Granite City, Schermer's Market, Schermer's Men's and Boys' Shop, Schermer's XL Hardware, Duffin Brothers Hardware and P. N. Hirsch in Granite City.

Daley's Paint Store, Friedman's in Madison, Hickens in Madison, Tri-Mor, Bow, and Gilk's Department Store, Leader Department Store, Ben Burns Cafeteria, Hook's Tavern, Bilch Tavern, Ben Barr, Mrs. Kathryn Lowe, the Inn Between Tavern, Pete and Mary's Tavern and Charlie's Restaurant.

Tickets, costing $2.00 each, are available at Graham's Book Store; Schermer's 12th Street and Madison Avenue; Hook's 2478 Madison Ave.; in between, 3200 Maryville Boulevard; the Cardinal Beauty Culture, 1813 Edison Ave.; and Bilch Tavern, 1108 Greenwood St., Madison.

Contributions to the fund have been used to pay funeral expenses for Michelle and for ambulance services and installation of a telephone for Mrs. Lowe. The fund balance today is $440.

Management of The Den, 2401 State St., also is planning a barbecue to aid the fund.

The benefit event will take place Saturday and Sunday, July 14 and 15, with all proceeds from the outdoor barbecue, including carpool service, going to assist the family.

6% base pay raises granted GC employees

Wage increases of 6 percent of total base pay were established by the Granite City Council Monday night for city employees during the current 1973-74 fiscal year. The raises will be retroactive to May 1.

Acting on a recommendation of Alderman Sam Whitmer, chairman of the negotiating committee, the council approved a salary increase plan under which most employees will receive raises in the same amount as their fellow workers in the same department.

The plan provides for a 6 percent increase figured on the total base pay of all workers in the department, with the total raises then averaged by the number of workers in the department. Whitmer noted this would give each employee the same percentage raise, rather than applying individual percentage raises which would give the largest increases to those with the highest salaries.

Only exception was members of the Operating Engineers Union employed at the sewage treatment plant. Whitmer explained that a flat 6 percent increase on individual salaries was agreed to because nearly all the employees now are paid on the same scale.

The 6 percent base pay average wage boost was granted for City Hall employees, members of the Police, Fire and Street departments and for the city hall custodians. An increase of 25 cents per hour also was approved for extra clerical help in the City Hall.

Although budget figures have not yet been finalized, city officials estimated the increase for this fiscal year will cost from $90,000 to $100,000.

The council also approved on Whitmer's motion a request by members of the first department for a reduction in the work week from 56.1 hours to 52 hours.

Whitmer said he recommended the cut in hours on assurances by Fire Chief Don Parente that the reduction could be made without affecting the department's manpower schedules or incurring overtime costs.

The council Monday night also referred to its pollution plant committee an arrangement for acquiring an additional 30 acres of land needed at the Granite City Army Installation for construction of the city's proposed secondary sewage treatment plant.

Mayor Paul Schuler told the council that the Army had required a monthly payment of $325 for the tract, which will adjoin the present city-leased tract on which the primary treatment plant is located. Since the city now pays $1,000 per year for the primary treatment plant site, the total rental cost for both tracts will amount to $5,500 per year, Schuler said.

Schuler told the council that he has received word that Granite City now has advanced to a priority of 13 for a federal loan for construction of a secondary plant. The city is waiting word momentarily concerning federal action on grant applications.

Harold Theerman of Harland Bartholomew & Associates, St. Louis, planning engineers, distributed to council members copies of a study for Granite City's Topics program under safety features of the four major intersections on Madison Avenue are to be developed.

Theerman said planning for the Namooks Road intersection at Johnson-Peeling Roads as part of the Topics program in about two-thirds complete and possibly may be ready for a September bid letting by the state.

SMOTHERED IN STRAW. Pots which have been fired at temperatures ranging from 1,700 to 1,800 degrees for at least an hour are removed from the kiln while still red hot and smothered in straw covered by an oil drum in a ceramics workshop at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville. The smothering, which is part of the Raku (Japanese) "instant" firing technique, reduces the metallic oxides in the pottery and results in a metallic finish. From the left: Jack Cannon, associate professor of art and design at SIUE; Art Stewart, St. Louis, a student; and Susan Cochran, Kansas City, a graduate student.

FINISHING TOUCHES are applied by Norman Schulman, chairman of the ceramics department of the Rhode Island School of Design, to a group of bowls and vases being prepared for Indian firing in a pottery workshop at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville. The visiting artist explained that Indian firing features the use of burning manure, in which the pots are fired at temperatures ranging from 900 to 1,200 degrees for four to six hours.

RED HOT. Pottery which has been fired at temperatures as high as 1,800 degrees is removed from a gas-fired kiln while the pieces are still red hot. Handling the tongs is Art Stewart of St. Louis, a student in the ceramics workshop which was held this summer at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville. Next step in the Raku (Japanese) method of finishing pottery is to place the hot piece in a closed steel barrel filled with straw, where it will smother for about 30 minutes, resulting in a metallic finish on the pottery. Various techniques in firing pottery were demonstrated at the two-week workshop.

The city awarded a contract to the Ernest Co. two weeks ago. In other action, the council authorized Alderman Gerald Parmley, chairman of the finance committee, to call bids on health insurance for city employees.

Enacted an ordinance authorizing payment of $1,000 for a government consultant intern, Jack Scarborough, who will work for the city for eight weeks during the summer.

Approved a contract on low bid to State Radio & Television Co. to install an air conditioning unit in the mayor's office at a price of $250.

Enacted an ordinance establishing a stop sign on Willow at East Street for northbound traffic.

Approved total general fund claims of $27,931, motor fuel tax bills of $2,406, sewage treatment plant bills of $328 and sewer extension fund bills of $53.

Approved the city payroll for the first half of July, totaling $76,604.

Request a black fill Madison school post

A petition requesting that the Madison Board of Education appoint a black to replace former board member Theodores Kemp, a black, is being prepared by members of the Concerned Parents of Dunbar School and will be distributed during a meeting of the group at 7 p.m. Monday in the Dunbar School cafeteria.

At a meeting last Monday night, about 75 West Madison residents, members of the Concerned Parents group and of the Dunbar School Parent Teacher Association, voted unanimously to petition the board for appointment of a black.

Kemp resigned for health reasons and because he said he could not agree with the board's policies concerning integration, particularly the plan to close Dunbar School, which has a totally black enrollment.

An appointment must be made before July 28 or the county superintendent can call a special election to fill the vacancy.

The parents at the meeting also expressed disapproval at the board's plans to close Dunbar School and planned actions to oppose the closing, including further court action.

80 centuries traced by Koster expedition

Despite floods that damaged the laboratory and dormitory buildings of the Northwestern Archeological Program in Kampsville this spring, the Koster Expedition has resumed excavations and is only three days behind schedule.

The goal of the 1973 expedition is to extensively explore Horizons 11 and 12, which lie below the present floor of the main trench, now 120 feet long and 85 feet wide.

Horizon 11 has been carbon-14 dated at 5100 B.C. Horizon 12 is earlier and the archeologists are guessing dating it about 6000 B.C.

There have been much earlier discoveries of man in the new world, but Horizons 11 and 12 at Koster are believed to present the first real opportunity for archeologists to get extensive information on the middle archaic peoples of the central Mississippi valley.

Excavators are now working at depths 20 to 31 feet below modern ground surface and so face many technical problems, including pumping rainwater out of the trench and lowering the ground water table in which the two horizons are submerged. Visitors are welcome at the Koster Site and are able to walk up to the edge of the trench to watch the crews digging.

Guides are on duty at the site seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., but the crew does not dig on Wednesdays.

Guided tours for groups may be arranged by calling (618) 653-4525.

The Koster Site is located on the east side of the Illinois River five miles south of Eldred on the Eldred-Grafton blacktop road. The Koster Site is on the west side of the Illinois River.

Visitors wishing to see both the Koster site and the museum may cross the river by ferry at Highway 106 or drive over the bridge at Hardin.

Anti-abortion group plans march July 14

The Granite City Right to Life chapter will sponsor a "March for Life" from Nameki Village Shopping Center to Civic Park, Niedringhaus and Delmar Avenues, Saturday, July 14.

The march will be a demonstration against the U.S. Supreme Court's decision allowing abortions. A spokesman for the group said the march will be "a public demonstration of concern for the unborn deprived of their personhoods."

Marchers will assemble at the shopping center at 10 a.m., which will begin at 10 a.m. The group, wearing black arm bands and carrying posters, will walk to the park and then will be transported in cars back to the starting place where State Rep. Robert Walters (R-Alton) and Mrs. Felicia Goeken, executive secretary of the Alton Right to Life chapter, will address the marchers.

Volunteers who are not able to march are asked to bring their auto to Civic Park to help transport marchers back to the shopping center.

WACKY AND FRIEND. Terri Kaye Theis, 14, has raised her pet duck since he hatched from an egg on May 18. "Wacky" has been residing at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Theis, 3336 Zippel Ave., but will move to a farm in southern Missouri next week.

'Wacky' outgrows city, will move to country

While visiting her uncle, Dr. Edward H. Theis, and family in Fond du Lac, Wis. Terri found the egg under a tree in the municipal park and took it home with her. She took it to Marvin Rensing, biology teacher at Coolidge Junior High School, who put the egg in an incubator at the school. On May 19 the duck was hatched. Terri then began raising her very own mallard duck, which now follows her around the house and yard, and likes for her to pick him up and hold him in her lap. Since "Wacky" has grown into a rather large duck, Terri feels the city is no place for a duck to live, so she is taking him to be with family friends on a farm in Missouri next week. Terri, who is fond of pets, has four Gerbils, a Siamese cat named "Missy" and a toy poodle "Coco."

In years to come, with appropriate national funding, individual grants through the program may total as much as $1,400 per year.

A special seminar for high school counselors will be held on the program from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Illinois students praise work of Sen. Vadalabene

James W. Manis, chairman of the Association of Illinois Student Governments, speaking for the students of Illinois at the state General Assembly session closed, praised the work of State Senator Sam Vadalabene, particularly noting his help in the passage of HB 1628 in the Senate by a vote of 47-1.

This bill provides for non-voting student representation on all university governing boards.

"Sen. Vadalabene," said Manis, "has been a true friend to students and an able advocate of higher education in the Senate."

"He is always ready to meet with his constituents, and he takes an active interest in their problems and welfare."

"After the floor vote on HB 1628, he stood up to commend the Association for its part in giving students a more direct voice in their own affairs."

Joe Lucido to head Cancer Fund 'Tag Day'

Joe Lucido, manager of Granite City Steel Employees Federal Credit Union, has been appointed to head the annual "Tag Day" project of the American Cancer Society, scheduled for Saturday, July 28, in Granite City. It was announced this week by the society's Madison County office in Alton.

Volunteers to aid in the tag day event currently are being recruited by the project director, who said at least 62 "selling workers" are needed to cover areas in downtown Granite City and at locations in Bellemore, American and Nameoki village shopping center.

Those contributing their time to the project will be asked to solicit donations for about two hours, if possible, Lucido said, adding, however, that any amount of time will be appreciated.

Persons wishing to sign up as volunteers or those interested in receiving additional information are invited to call the director at 452-7116, or 476-2074.

Role of Venice in America's commerce cited by Congress

The long and eventful history of the city of Venice was praised in remarks by Congressman Melvin Price of this district on the occasion of the municipality's centennial on June 28, an issue of the Congressional Record received here this week discloses.

He cited Venice's role in the development of early river commerce and "its present participation in the great industrial and commercial activity of the metropolitan area."

The Congressional Record is the listing of proceedings and debates of the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives.

The centennial statement by Cong. Price appears on Pages H 5632 and H 5633 of Issue No. 102, Vol. 119, 93rd Congress, First Session. It is entitled, "The 100th anniversary of Venice, Ill."

The congressman's comments follow:

Mr. Speaker, it was 100 years ago today that the village of Venice, Ill., was established along the eastern bank of the Mississippi River near St. Louis.

Venice, which has since been incorporated as a city, has played an important role in the history and development of the northeast area.

The site which eventually became Venice was first settled by one John Atkins, who arrived from Kentucky in 1812.

During the 18th century, Venice became a terminus of the old wagon route, "The National Way," or "The Old Rock Road."

In 1815, John Anthony began using flat-bottomed boats to persons wishing to cross the Mississippi.

Later, the ferry boat Brooklyn operated on the river from the Venice site.

Today Venice, which owns the McKinley Bridge, is still involved in getting people and products across the river.

In 1842, a young Army engineer, Lt. Robert E. Lee, directed the building of a dike extending from Venice to Kerr Island in the Mississippi.

However, an 1844 flood destroyed it, and a rebuilt dike was similarly carried away in 1851. These early floods caused Dr. Cornelius Campbell to suggest the name "Venice" when the village was organized in 1873.

Fortunately the floods were ended in the early 1900s and this American Venice no longer shares with its Italian namesake the characteristics of watery roadways.

Almost immediately after it began operating officially, Venice experienced a period of prosperity with commerce in grain predominance.

Railroad lines converged in the city, giving rise to rail yards and railroad rights-of-way. A significant factor in the economic life of Venice and together with power plants and retail business—makes Venice an important community in the area.

There have been 10 mayors of the city of Venice, including Dr. John E. Lee, who has served as mayor since 1967.

Dr. Lee's father, Dr. John E. Lee Sr., saw long service at city hall as mayor from 1911 to 1915 and again from 1917 to 1924.

Dr. Lee's father, Dr. John E. Lee Sr., saw long service at city hall as mayor from 1911 to 1915 and again from 1917 to 1924.

Mr. Speaker, as Venice celebrates her centennial, let us congratulate its citizens, saluting not only the city's past role in the development of early

New round of county fairs is beginning

Copley News Service Springfield—Shirley Spielman is an attractive, friendly, soft-spoken woman. But she handles a pretty tough job.

As the recently appointed superintendent of the Division of County Fairs, she is responsible for the administrative end of 102 county fairs to be held this summer in Illinois. In addition, the division distributes funds to and supervises 4-H shows held throughout the state.

The first of the 102 scheduled fairs, Pike County Fair, began June 29 in Griggsville, and Mrs. Spielman plans to attend as many of the fairs as possible.

"I'm really getting excited about the coming fairs," said the superintendent. "I feel they are a 'show place' of agriculture. The 4-H activities, especially, give the children an opportunity to show off their projects."

The mother of four boys, Mrs. Spielman is from Rockford. She grew up on a farm which job.

In her capacity as superintendent, Mrs. Spielman is responsible for the fair and exhibition fund, which distribution of state aid to county fairs and 4-H shows.

Although appropriated by the General Assembly, funding for the fairs does not come from state taxes but from the Agricultural Premium Fund and the Fair the Exposition Fund. Monies for these funds come from a tax on pari-mutuel betting at the race tracks in metropolitan areas.

"We have experienced no cutbacks in appropriations this year," the superintendent reported.

There are five areas of funding administered by the division. They include: the rehabilitation fund, which aids the county associations in upgrading their buildings, grounds and facilities; the fair and exposition fund, which affects seven counties and Chicago's McCormick Place; and the 4-H and FFA funds premium.

Eligibility requirements must be met by the fairs before state aid.

Any interested group wishing to form a local association with the goal of beginning a county fair may contact Mrs. Spielman for assistance, she emphasized.

What looks ahead for the new superintendent? She lists a clarification in rules and regulations governing the allocation of state aid to agricultural fairs as a top priority. She believes this would enable people at the grassroots level to better understand what is expected of them.

541 Scouts attend camp in first three weeks

In the first three weeks of operation, Boy Scout Camp Sunken located near Potosi, Mo., has had a total attendance of 541. With five weeks left to operate, camp attendance is expected to far exceed the 1,170 attending the eight-week period last season.

Last year's season set an all-time high attendance record. Camping Chairman W. F. "Mick" Strange of Madison said there are several reasons for a record attendance this year.

First: the camp staff "did a great job implementing the program last summer and everyone had a good experience, so they are coming back," he said.

The Cahokia Lodge, Order of the Arrow, did a great job in camp promotion, putting out promotional posters, visiting troop parent nights, showing camp slides and in general talking up camp.

"Scouters in all levels of the program—Scoutmasters, troop committeemen, commissioners, training committee members and the executive board—have been made more aware of what a really great experience a week at Camp Sunken is, and have given tremendous help in encouraging boys to attend and securing equipment," he said.

"One of our major problems in camp is equipment. The camp has grown in attendance so fast the last couple of years, it takes all the money we can gather just to take care of the expansion and we need to be replacing some of our old equipment."

Those who will attend camp from the Quad-Cities area next week include:

Antique auto show set Sunday at park

The Metro-East Antique Auto Club will hold its fourth annual antique car show from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday at Wilson Park. Admission is free. Coal research is vital to Illinois and key to energy solution-Price

Congressman Melvin Price (Dem., 33rd Ill. District), commenting on the President's energy message, said, "I am particularly pleased with the emphasis being given to the acceleration of research directed toward finding economical processes for gasification and liquefaction of coal."

Cong. Price, who is chairman of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy and who has been intimately concerned with the nation's energy crisis, said that the fact that "Illinois is blessed with large coal reserves indicates that this state will play an important role in alleviating our current and future problems."

"Unfortunately, the coal is high in sulfur content. The coal research program will include an increased effort to find ways to bring about a desulfurization of the coal so that it can be used in nearby electric power plants, perhaps mine-mouth plants, which must comply with the existing federal and state standards for air quality."

"Gasification and/or liquefaction of coal will permit conversion to a form which is easily transportable—for example, by pipeline or railroad tank car.

"There is hardly a thinking person in our nation," Price continued, "who does not now fully realize the significance of the short-term energy dilemma which we face."

"Fortunately, the reserves of coal throughout our nation are plentiful and therein lies a partial solution to our short-term energy problems."

"If we can find better ways to utilize coal for energy production, we can ease our current and projected deficiencies in supplies of fuel oil and gasoline.

"It is also encouraging to know that further work will be done on improving mining techniques which both increase productivity and improve the health and safety of the miner," Price concluded.

The East St. Louis has been the Quad-City area's representative in Congress since 1944, and much of his 28 years in Washington has been devoted to the fields of energy and national defense.

Other states joining Illinois in seeking impounded school funds

Michigan, Nevada and Texas have joined Illinois in suing the Nixon administration for the release of $2 million in federal school funds, State School Superintendent Michael J. Bakalis noted this week.
The suit, filed June 25 by Bakalis, claims the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) has acted illegally by not releasing funds authorized and appropriated by Congress during the 1972-73 school year.
A mandatory injunction forcing HEW to release impounded National Defense Education Act (NDEA) Title III funds is being asked.
Judge William B. Lynch, on June 28 issued a temporary restraining order requiring HEW to issue Illinois a letter of credit in the amount of approved NDEA Title III programs.

The order froze the impounded funds so they would not lapse on June 30 — the final effective date of the appropriation — allowing the funds to be available should the court find in Bakalis' favor.
In an action June 29, Judge Lynch allowed the three other states to intervene in the suit. They contend they also are adversely affected by the federal action.
The judge also amended his restraining order to cover the three intervening states. A full hearing of the case is scheduled for July 20.
"I am pleased that Michigan, Nevada and Texas have joined me in this action," Bakalis said, "because it demonstrates the national scope of the problem created by the administration's action. Should other states be permitted to intervene, that will become all the more evident."

Bakalis said the central question is whether HEW has the power to ignore the intent of Congress. He contends the agency does not have discretionary authority to change congressional will.
Congress authorized the NDEA Title III program in 1972 and appropriated $50 million for distribution during fiscal year 1973. Proposals were submitted and approved by HEW, but officials refused to release the money.
Title III funds are used to improve instruction in "critical curriculum areas" like mathematics, science, history and English.
HEW Secretary Caspar A. Weinberger, a defendant in the suit, held back the funds, stating, "... as part of the President's commitment to control federal spending, funding for a number of HEW programs is being constrained in 1973 and 1974. And in the case of NDEA Title III, the President's 1974 budget proposed no funding."

Also named in the suit was John Ottina, acting commissioner of education.
Bakalis said the HEW action has cost Illinois about $2 million. He added that the impounded situation goes beyond schools and raises major constitutional questions.
"While the Nixon administration's impoundment of education aid has deeply hurt schools," Bakalis said, "the refusal of federal officials to carry out the mandate and intent of Congress has elevated the question to one of constitutional crisis."
"If, in fact, the executive branch of government can ignore the will of the people's elected representatives, we will have lost one of the most basic checks and balances of American democracy."
Illinois has lost an estimated $38-$40 million in impounded federal school

THREE PERSONS HURT
Debra L. Moore, 18, of Fairview Heights, and two passengers in her auto sustained injuries when her car was in an accident with a car driven by Robert Prince, 2133 Edison Ave., at 6:45 p.m. Wednesday at 21st Street and Madison Avenue.
The passengers were Michael Diamond, 24, of 400 Kathy Drive, and Mark Hellig, 1, of 4003 Gaslight Walk.
Money, according to Bakalis. Seeking restoration of that money, Bakalis has joined in a Pennsylvania suit to force the release of other impounded education funds.
Last week, a federal judge ordered the funds in question in Pennsylvania frozen to prevent their return to the general revenue fund before the case is decided.
Ten states have joined the action, challenging the impoundment of more than $380 million for educational programs.

Pontoon sets hearing on zoning amendment

A public hearing on a proposed zoning ordinance amendment for Pontoon Beach will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday at the village hall, 3939 Lake Drive, Pontoon Beach.

The zoning ordinance change would allow property adjacent to the village limits to be annexed under any zoning classification recommended by the village board of zoning appeals.

At present, newly annexed property must be brought in under a residential classification. Village officials have indicated the change would expedite annexation of several parcels by avoiding the technicalities involved in rezoning after annexation.

INDIAN BASKET. Theodore R. Frisbee, assistant professor of anthropology at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, with a twined basket made 700 years ago by Pueblo Indians.

Indian twined basket presented to SIUE

A twined basket made 700 years ago by Pueblo Indians has been given to the anthropology department of Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville.

Charles P. Combs, professor of anthropology at SIUE, discovered the basket in Arizona. He gave it to the anthropologists because they could preserve and study it.

The basket was apparently intended to store grain, according to Theodore R. Frisbee, assistant professor of anthropology. It has a long, constricted neck, and measures about 15 inches tall and 12 inches in diameter.

A scientific analysis of the basket, using the carbon-14 method, estimates its date of manufacture at 1250 A.D. Frisbee said that other evidence, including the basket's style, substantiates the estimate.

Pueblo Indians have lived in the Arizona region since the time of Christ.

The basket will be displayed in the new anthropology teaching laboratory in the basement of the Classroom Building.

The laboratory is in a converted hallway. Displays are being constructed this summer to illustrate topics of interest to anthropology students.

Pasture management can offset high feed costs

By JAMES R. SHEARL
U. of I. Assistant
Extension Adviser

Expert forage and pasture management during the rest of the summer will be essential to help curb high feed costs for cattle.

Feeder cattle and growing calves that have been normally grown on dry lot will make more economical gains this year on well managed pastures.

U. of I. Extension animal scientist Burl Weichenhals notes that feeder cattle will make better use of pasture forage if they are not fed grain until the forage is grazed off or becomes mature.

A good legume-grass pasture can carry five steers per acre all summer with self-feeding of grain.

Here are some ideas to make maximum utilization of forage: Clip pasture as grasses mature to stimulate regrowth. Nitrogen applications of 75 to 125 pounds applied after first harvest will boost fall production of orchard grass, smooth bromegrass, tall fescue and reed canarygrass.

Bale grass pastures of dense stand to use for maintenance rations for cows this winter. Set up diversions to distribute grazing evenly around pastures. Cattle often graze in one or two areas and follow the same path to water and salt stations.

To divert grazing patterns, move salt stations and feed bunks every ten days. To further direct grazing patterns, use temporary fencing across cow paths to force movement to different parts of the pasture.

Sorghum-sudan pasture may be planted during mid summer to provide succulent forage during late summer season. Sorghum-sudan should be divided into plots to allow two to three weeks of regrowth after grazing. However, if machinery and labor are available daily green chopping of sorghum-sudan grasses is more efficient than grazing.

Free-choice feeding of liquid or dry protein-mineral rations will be of little benefit to feeder or breeding animals on summer pasture. The exception being when pastures become too dry and mature to be good sources of protein. In that case, feeder cattle or growing heifers should receive one-half to one pound of 30 to 40 percent protein supplement daily.

If you have an adequate supply of silage, consider having a nutrient analysis to determine exactly what additional protein your ration needs. There are laboratories in the Madison County area that can provide this service. In many instances, protein supplementation can be cut when the exact nutrient value of your ration is known.

The 11 highest producing herds in Madison County Dairy Herd Improvement in May are owned by Mrs. Freda Linenbroeker, Henry Zoelzer, Vernon Becker, Clarence Berg, Darco Holstein Farm, Vernon Warnecke, Jim Beane, Harold and Carl Baumann, Waldo Keilbach, Harold Klenke and Marvin Sille.

The herd of Mrs. Freda Linenbroeker was high for the year with 2.83 pounds of butterfat per cow per day. The Linenbroeker herd of 43 cows averaged 49.5 pounds of milk per cow per day with an average butterfat test of 4.07 percent.

Completing 365 days lactation with a record of 650 pounds or more of butterfat was a seven-year-old cow in the herd of Eugene Meyer with 724 pounds of butterfat and 19,566 pounds of milk, a three-year-old cow in the herd of Hrespee Brothers with 676 pounds of butterfat and 15,406 pounds of milk, and a four-year-old cow in the herd of Darco Holstein Farm with 657 pounds of butterfat and 17,086 pounds of milk.

State Fair Improvement figures for the 12-month period ending in April show two Madison County herds with top rating cows. A brown Swiss cow, owned by Vernon Becker, More, produced 19,790 pounds of milk and 772 pounds of butterfat. A Jersey cow, owned by Manitou Inc., Alhambra, produced 12,520 pounds of milk and 716 pounds of butterfat. Both cows rated in the top ten for the state in milk and butterfat production within their respective breeds.

Public water sources show signs of defect

Copley News Service
Springfield—Out of 1,600 public water supply sources in Illinois, there are still 232 not meeting state requirements that a certified operator be in charge.

However, according to John Anderson of the bureau of public water supply in the State Environmental Protection Agency, the number was about 150 higher 18 months ago, and has been reduced by a campaign by the EPA to secure more compliance with the law.

Meanwhile, Anderson said, about one third of the state's 1,600 supplies of public water have some sanitary defect or other—usually not very serious or hard to correct, but each indicating some place where disease could enter the public water supplies.

Overall, the state has a good record for safe water, Anderson said, since the last known case of a death in the state caused by bad water occurred in the late '30s or early '40s at Meador prison when a typhoid epidemic from an infected water source resulted in several deaths.

A potentially dangerous situation existed a couple of years ago when a number of visitors to Pere Marquette State Park became ill after drinking water which came from a well in the park which had been improperly installed.

and became infected from a septic tank located above it, Anderson said.

In the present case of public water supplies with sanitary defects, Anderson said, the majority are chiefly problems caused by poor maintenance over the years. In 85% of the cases, he estimated, the trouble could be corrected simply and with little expense.

With an eye to better maintenance and operation of public water supplies in future, Anderson said the department is supporting proposed changes in state laws governing certification of operators. Presently, he said, operators are locked into the level at which they are certified, and have no way to work their way up to higher certifications in their own profession. In addition, an operator who retires must give up his certification automatically, he said, which means small communities may have to do without an operator when they have a qualified retiree in the community, but he no longer has certification.

The law as it stands regarding public water supplies is also unenforceable, Anderson said, and the bureau and the EPA are supporting an amendment which would put enforcement of standards in the hands of the attorney general and the Pollution Control Board.

Since the agency was formed,

Marriage license issued

A marriage license has been issued in St. Louis to D. E. Nolde, 728 Cumberland Ave., St. Louis, and J. White, Granite City.

he said, an intensive training program has been set up for water supply operators. One-day seminars on a specific topic are held, with more than 3,000 operators reached this year by 27 such meetings on four different topics.

An in-depth, 15-week short course is being offered at a number of junior colleges through the state, so most operators wouldn't have to travel more than 50 miles to attend, and a correspondence course has been devised which presently has about 1,000 persons enrolled, including 200 to 300 in other states throughout the United States. A two-day, state-wide operators conference is held each fall.

"Everybody assumes I got it from that rap right here," Anderson said, "but it doesn't have to be true. Our safe water supplies are there because stiff standards have been set and generally enforced. People take their water supplies for granted, and when things are going right, the operator's training isn't as important."

"When something goes wrong is when you know how good your operator is, because then he may have to work around the clock to be sure you keep having safe water coming from the kitchen tap."

State has 'wait and see' attitude toward new U.S. fund sharing program

Copley News Service
Springfield—Illinois officials like other state officials are watching the development of President Nixon's proposed plan to use revenue sharing for community development.

State officials along with some community officials to which Copley News Service has spoken are not quite sure at this time just what effect it would have in Illinois.

The President apparently is trying for a long-range program. He said the first year cost of such a program would be in the neighborhood of some $2.3 billion.

Apparently the revenue sharing for community development program or as it is officially called the Better Communities Act, will replace either in part or totally the federal-grant-in-aid program.

Under the federal-grant-in-aid program, local governmental units would receive federal funds for various programs if certain standards were met.

In some cases there would have to be some local funds used. Some of the funds for the federal-grant-in-aid programs are presently funneled through the state government operations. In some cases the programs actually federal-state-local governmental programs. The proposed program is before congressional committees. It will probably be up to these committees to hammer out some type of acceptable program as was done when the Congress approved the current federal revenue sharing program. The federal revenue sharing program was finally approved after a great deal of discussions. An Illinoisan was in the forefront in the fight for federal revenue sharing.

He was former Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie. He maintained that in the end the money actually should be returned to the people within the states rather than funneled to the federal government.

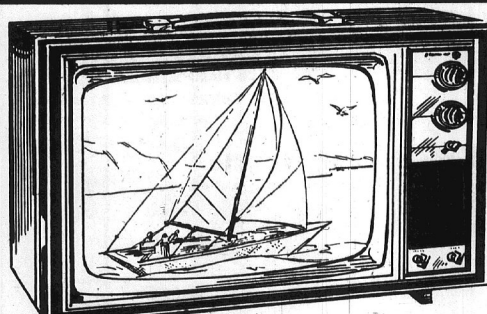

It is unclear at this time just how much money Illinois would receive under the new proposal. State officials say that the formula or the proposal itself could be altered eventually in the Congress and thus change the amount of money coming to Illinois.

Also state officials say at this time it is difficult to determine just what programs or units of local governments will be included in the new proposal. State officials say that it is state officials along with local governments will just have to adopt the usual "wait and see" policy.

Venice board may wish to consider a lower rate increase proposal or consolidation of existing school districts

Hindsight is always better than foresight, but it would seem clear from the 239-93 defeat of the June 30 referendum that Venice school voters feel a $1.20 education fund tax rate ceiling increase is too much at one time.

Such special elections traditionally have been limited to raising the tax limit by 40 cents for each $100 of assessed valuation.

Because the financial outlook of Community Unit District No. Three is serious, some additional corrective action will need to be taken by the school board and citizenry.

Chief alternatives at this point may be submission of a new rate increase proposal with a figure considerably less than $1.20, or development of plans leading to consolidation of school systems.

Mississippi River Festival outdoor concerts are about to resume, can brighten summer evenings for thousands

The Mississippi River Festival, called this region's greatest cultural asset, is about to begin its fifth season of campus musical concerts.

The series of performances for a hillside, partly tent-covered audience will open with a "happy birthday" party at 5 p.m. Saturday, July 14, at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville.

The widely-acclaimed St. Louis Symphony Orchestra will participate in that night's concert as well as on a number of other evenings during this month and August.

In addition, there will be appearances during the 1973 season by famous individuals and groups covering the full range of music, including popular, folk, jazz, operatic, rock and classical.

Tickets are available for specific concerts and for the summer series at SIUE, Powell Symphony Hall and other locations.

We recommend attendance unhesitatingly; as all who have visited the River Festival know, the programs provide a refreshing and enjoyable way to end a hot summer day.

There is room for several tens of thousands of people at each performance.

Recycling of scrap iron and steel being discouraged by incentives to use irreplaceable natural resources

The Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel appears to have a valid point in its current effort to encourage recycling of man-made resources by allowing them "at least to compete with irreplaceable natural resources."

When iron and steel scrap is used in place of virgin iron ore to make new steel, the environmental benefits in many ways.

The U. S. conserves diminishing ore reserves, uses less energy and water, reduces air and water pollution, and reduces the problem of the metallic solid waste generated by each consumer daily.

With so many potential benefits, it would seem that the federal government would encourage use of scrap. But two of its policies hinder recycling:

1. Freight rates to haul scrap iron have averaged 2 1/2 times more than the rates to haul iron ore, as governed by the Interstate Commerce Commission. This results in a $4.21 higher cost than necessary to produce a ton of steel using scrap iron as the raw material.

2. Tax incentives are available to ore producers but not to steel mills or foundries utilizing scrap.

Both policies should be given new study, in the light of the facts that have just been assembled.

The only time one can start at the top vocationally is when one is hired to dig ditches.

The wrongs of some people occasionally get mixed up with the rights of others.

Poverty and loneliness are twin foes

There probably are thousands of John W. Smiths walking the streets of America. But how many are 79, growing progressively blind and living on $30.20 a month?

Even so, this John W. Smith with the common name has an uncommon courage in the face of almost crushing odds. He is one of the nation's millions of elderly who wage a day-to-day battle with twin enemies—poverty and loneliness.

But our John W. Smith, for 15 years an engineer with the City of San Diego, Calif., and later a ship repairman for many years, appears to be winning over most of his foes.

The fight he figures to lose eventually is the one against approaching blindness.

Afflicted with glaucoma, a stubborn eye disease which often baffles medical science, Smith can move about outside unaided during the daylight hours if he is cautious. After dark he is helpless to leave his tiny hotel room unless there is someone around to guide him.

Medical experts might be able to halt the invasion of glaucoma before it brings total blindness in the next year or two, if Smith could afford their help.

"I draw $176.20 a month in Social Security and another $73 in retirement pay," he explains. "My hotel rent is $75 a month, so that just leaves enough for food and clothing.

There's nothing left for fighting glaucoma."

A World War I veteran, Smith for a time received pension for his military service. But when his Social Security and retired pay climbed to $40 more than the $2,600 a year poverty level set by the Veterans Administration, the agency took the $44.86 away from Smith.

"I can't even get VA eye care because of the poverty level rule," he said sadly. "I don't blame the agency, though. Those people have to abide by the laws that Congress writes."

If Smith had proper legal advice, there's a chance lawyers could find a way to acquire some government-paid medical aid to help combat his eye ailment. But, like millions of other aged people, he has no recourse to the law and hesitates to seek help from a member of Congress.

This is a problem tackled by the U.S. Senate Committee on the Aging and described by Chairman Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J., last week.

"The elderly comprise nearly one in three of all the poor, but have received only a tiny fraction of legal services proportionate to their numbers."

"There are many reasons for this, the chief ones reflecting the timidity and withdrawal that often characterize the elderly and the lack of knowledge and interest in the aged that characterize young lawyers."

In fact, the American Bar Association recently established its first committee dealing exclusively with problems of the elderly.

Smith feels he must live in the downtown area because of his inability to get around alone after dark. His room is in a hotel for the aged, a place where many sit day after day watching the world go by outside, waiting for visitors who never come, for the sound of voices they never hear. Often their only companion is loneliness.

But Smith fights against all those invisible enemies of the old.

"I have a brother in New Hampshire," he says. "I don't see him very often because of finances. But I don't give myself time to be lonely."

"I take advantage of the senior citizens' clubs, for one thing. I belong to four of them. I go to dances twice a week, and there's always entertainment and singing."

A widower for 10 years now, Smith has a lady companion who takes him in her car to club meetings and dances. He also serves as chaplain at a senior citizens' lounge.

"Religion and God have given me extra strength," Smith says. "His hand is on my shoulder. Prayer, I believe, has given me special strength."

At 93, Maie Rogers Carnahan smokes her cornob pipe every day, just as she did as a young woman on the Texas prairies.

Life has bypassed millions of elderly Americans, leaving them with only a chair-ridden view of the world around them. But some have outwitted or perhaps outlasted old age with what the late Sir Noel Coward might have called the "blithe spirit."

One of those who has shaken off the anxieties, the illnesses, the financial worries, the loneliness of the aged is Mrs. Carnahan, the daughter of a Texas doctor who shed her role as a belle of the prairie when she was 21 to marry a traveling salesman.

Her hearing nearly gone but her voice as strident as a woman's half her age, Mrs. Carnahan recalls her 30 years with the clarity of a computer's memory bank.

Sitting in her room in a San Diego, Calif., home for the elderly, she recounts how her father told her he received his doctor's degree from Tennessee Medical College the day she was born. The Rogers family moved from Tennessee to the Texas plains when Maie was only six, she recalls.

"My daddy was raised on a Virginia plantation," Mrs. Carnahan says. "In those days people made their own clothes. My daddy was a doctor and so were my two brothers, in the days when doctors made horse-and-buggy calls."

"I had three boys, and one of my sons had three boys and they helped to make Texas history. I've had a complicated life. I could write a book if I had a typewriter."

Her recollections of the past don't seem to dim her enthusiasm for the present.

"I've had a good life and the doctors say I have a lot of years left," she says, smiling. "I'm still young in spirit because God has been so gracious and good to me. He blessed me with a love of everything. When you've got God and Christ with you, life is a joy. I can't express it but I feel it."

Sometimes one of old age's cruel thrusts is the lack of concern of children for their parents. But Mrs. Carnahan still has two living sons, one of whom lives close enough to visit her regularly.

"They are a great comfort to me," she says.

Mrs. Carnahan's husband, William G. Carnahan, died 40 years ago.

"But I still remember him as a big, handsome Irish boy," she says, smiling.

Lawrence Benton was a boy of eight in Matteson, Mich., when Mrs. Carnahan was born. Now, at a pink-cheeked 101, he lives with his memories in a private Lemon Grove, Calif., home outwitted to care for the aged.

Aside from his savings, Benton's sole income is a $240-a-month veteran's pension for his service in the Philippines when President William McKinley called up 75,000 troops to help put down the insurrection at the turn of the century.

"I served in Luzon under Gen. (of the Army) Douglas MacArthur's father," Benton recalls. He was discharged in 1901 after winning the Silver Star for gallantry in action.

But Benton stayed on in the Philippines for 37 years in government Civil Service, as collector of customs and later as comptroller of the Manila harbor board, before returning to live in his native land. His wife of 44 years died eight years ago at the age of 91.

Now, a captive in a small room lived with objects to trigger his memory—including a 100-year-old clock he remembers as a boy in Michigan—Benton is content.

"The only time I leave here is to go to the Veterans Administration clinic for a monthly checkup," he says, grinning. "But I have my old things, my memories, and my typewriter, and still, correlation. I'm losing my sight to glaucoma, a baffling eye disease."

HIDDEN PEOPLE Golden years bring despair for many

Editor's Note: America is the richest nation in the world, yet the plight of our elderly grows worse instead of better. This is the first of three articles about the nation's aged, their defeats and their victories, told mostly by them.

By FRANK MACOMBER
Copley News Service

Look at American life as though it were a great drama spread across a vast stage. One act of the drama is about the old folks, the aged, the over-the-hill club whose membership numbers about 20 million.

You read about the autumn years, the winter years, the golden years lived out by the aged. Talk to them and you find that for many they are the years of despair, of loneliness, of anxiety. For the more fortunate, of course, the coast down the long hill on the back side of life is a pleasant if not an exciting one.

Government at all levels does what it can for the old folks. But its leaders concede no laws can be patterned to fit the needs of all the elderly. And there is not enough money in any government treasury to finance a panacea for the problems of the aging and the very old.

Mrs. Mary Marcey of Silver Spring, Md., can tell you about it. At 62 she has known poverty, illness and larger than most, some of the conditions the White House Conference

William R. Hutton, executive director of the National Council of Senior Citizens.

The aged are twice as likely to be poor as the young. One in four over 65 is impoverished, by government standards.

"When I saw my husband after his operation," Mrs. Marcey recalls, "he had a $5 bill in his shirt pocket. I wouldn't get my government check for five days, so I asked him if I could have it."

"He said he might need it, so I left it. And wouldn't you know, somebody stole it off him the next day. So neither of us got it."

Most aging folks have a fear of skyrocketing health care costs. And so it is with Mrs. Marcey. The nursing home where her husband lives, she explains, costs $670 a month.

"They seem like they care," she concedes, "but you must fight for everything, they're so busy. It's better that the hospital though. He was in intensive care the first few days after the operation and then they put him in a room with another man for $80 a day—just for the room."

"I don't know how he's going to pay for it all."

Health insurance—Medicare—will help but won't begin to take care of everything, Mrs. Marcey says.

Hutton says medical demands and climbing health costs are the second most critical problem for the aged. And a Senate Select Committee on Aging reports that "Medicare covers nearly half (47 per cent) of the total personal health-care expenditures of the aged (averaging about $700), leaving uncovered an average health bill considerably larger than the total health bill for the average younger person."

RELIGION Leah tells how to beat drugs

By CLARE COX
Copley News Service

GARRISON, N.Y. — Once upon a time Leah could have been anybody's pretty little sister or the wide-eyed, fresh-faced girl next door.

She lived in a comfortable middle-income home in Houston, attended school, played and studied, and dreamed of being a fashion designer when she grew up.

But Leah felt defeated before she started. She was a wallflower. Boys just didn't ask her for dates. She craved attention — and so she decided to "show them" by being different.

Leah began to smoke cigarettes because it was "smart" when she was in the sixth grade. Then she discovered alcohol and drank heavily. She smoked pot and began to run around with the wrong kind of crowd.

Although she had been a regular Sunday school pupil, she dropped out of church activities entirely.

A boyfriend introduced her to LSD and "speed," and at 17 she maintained her first shot of heroin.

From there Leah's road was laid out for her — straight downhill ... a number of arrests ... psychiatric treatment ... periods of "drying out" in hospitals or jails ... back to the streets to forge checks, steal and become a prostitute to support her habit ... more hospitals and jails.

After 10 years of living on this not-so-mercy-go-round, something finally happened to Leah. She was in jail again; this time for violating her probation. Her mother had become desperate after spending thousands of dollars for treatment and after enduring countless hours of anguish. So this time she decided to do nothing to help Leah get out. One of Leah's cellmates went to court to face narcotics charges.

While there, she was given a little pamphlet. It was a religious tract containing words of Biblical wisdom for junkies.

The girl took it back to jail and gave it to Leah, who for want of something to read, pored over every word — and decided that this might provide the way out for her.

Since nothing else had worked, the religious approach might, she reasoned, even though she had never been a particularly religious person. Anyway, she wanted to try. At 20 she was tired, tired of the life she had made out of her desire for attention. Now she wanted to get into the mainstream of society and go back to being the girl next door.

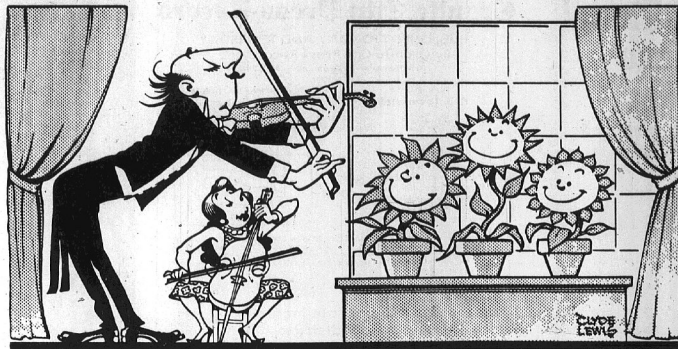

When Leah's mother visited her in jail, she promised she would telephone Teen Challenge, publisher of the brochure. Teen Challenge is a national organization, with an affiliate in Houston, that works among addicts.

One of its representatives arranged for Leah to be released from the organization's care. She lived with a Teen Challenge worker until arrangements could be made for her to be admitted to the Walter Hoving Home in Garrison, 60 miles north of New York City, where young women addicts are guided to a new purpose in life.

Leah was a changed person when she emerged from her year at the home, which was named after Walter Hoving, chairman of Tiffany & Co., and a supporter of the Teen Challenge movement. A year at Bible college followed.

While there, she met John Girard, a fellow student. They were married and are living in Kansas City, where he is preparing to enter training for the ministry. They are expecting a child early next year.

Her story has been told in a new book, "Leah," by Leah, published by the Fleming H. Revell Co. (She is identified only as Leah to protect her family.) She describes her downfall and rescue in the hope of helping others.

SHOPPING Tablecloth sizes vary

By JOYCE ROARK
Copley News Service

Shopping for table linens can be frustrating. My neighbor was telling me about shopping for a tablecloth for her dining room table.

To her amazement, the department store nearby carries three sizes of round tablecloths. She asked in the furniture department what the standard size is for a dining room table. The salesman told her that the size varies and that there is as much as a six-inch difference.

My neighbor ended up going back home, measuring her table and then returning to the store. You'd think her problems would have been over, but they weren't. The amount of overhang had to be calculated for each size to determine which would be about right for her table.

I've received similar complaints from people shopping for oval tablecloths. What can you do to ease the frustration? Accept the fact that table sizes are NOT standard. Measure your table before you go shopping and plan on at least a 10-15 inch overhang. Don't forget that the measurement on the tablecloth will include the table length, width, diameter, etc., plus twice the overhang length.

Tablecloths are about as varied in fiber content as in sizes. Which is best? That depends on your particular family.

Damask tablecloths are usually made of linen, rayon, cotton or a blend of these. Double damask has twice as many threads going crosswise as in the length of the fabric. This allows for more elaborate patterns.

If tightly woven, damask wears very well. It is characterized by a lustrous finish. If made of linen it's smooth and firm, has no lint, and soil and stains are easily removed. Rayon and rayon-cotton damask tablecloths are soft and supple. They drape well, resist wrinkles, and they wash and iron easily.

Damask tablecloths made of cotton are serviceable, but they don't wear as well as other fibers. They are less expensive and can be lint free.

If you like Belgian or Irish linens, then you will be happy to know that they are available with permanent-press finishes. Some are treated for easy soil removal. The characteristics of linen are: naturally lustrous, no lint, and highly absorbent.

Table linens made of rayon will resist mildew and if it's white, will not yellow with age.

Cotton tablecloths are reasonably priced, long wearing, and usually colorfast. You'll find most cotton tablecloths are preshrunk and mildew resistant — check the label to be sure.

Cotton-polyester blends are lint free, and have a permanent-press finish. They also resist soiling.

Lace is beautiful but if hand made will be extremely expensive. The fibers are natural or synthetic or a blend. The best characteristic is that stains can be sponged off without washing the entire cloth.

NAMES PLEASEING, TOO Music, soft words keep plants growing

By JOHN C. MOON
Copley News Service

Sam is the big plant with the unpronounceable Greek name near the living room window and Art is the rubber tree in the entry, and so on.

Just then the family dog, Tigre, and cat, Socks, strolled into the living room.

"I talk to them (the dog and cat)," she said, "so what's wrong with talking to the plants?"

I could see she was about to evangelize her on the merits of talking and playing music for plants, so I leaned back in my chair.

"There's a 'big revival now on putting plants in the home. I have read countless articles about talking to them and treating them right."

She admitted that some of the many plants in our house haven't been named yet. Some have two names, because of arguments among our family members.

The African violet is called Violet. Everyone assumes it is a female plant. Some plants have both male and female names, until the sex of the plant is determined. For the life of me, I haven't been able to determine the sex of trees and plants. I don't know what part of the plant's anatomy to inspect.

My wife should know more about the sex of the plants, though. She gives them a shower bath at least once each week.

My wife is intelligent, educated and cultured, so I guess her personality has rubbed off on the plants during her many conversations.

Anyway, I understand the plants don't like any cursing around the house. And they don't like rock 'n' roll or cowboy and country western music on the stereo.

Thus far, my wife hasn't pointed to any wilted or drooping leaves caused by the jokes I tell friends around the house. Maybe the plants like my jokes. They had better.

If you have a family with young children, vinyl may be best. Tablecloths made of vinyl are colorful, inexpensive, and easy to care for. Check for neatly finished edges and a good serviceable weight. The backing should be either cotton flannel or a non-slip poly-ether foam.

To avoid the frustration in buying tablecloths, you can use placemats. They are usually 12-inches x 18-inches and if made of cloth will generally have matching napkins.

TASTY FINALE—Fresh Apricot Creme Tarts, a classic finale for any meal, feature a filling of pureed apricots flavored with orange-flavored liqueur.

COOKING CORNER

Fruit dessert puts lot of sparkle in meal

By SUSAN DELIGHT
Copley News Service

FRESH APRICOT CREME TARTS (Makes 8 tarts)

A delicious fruit dessert can add immeasurable sparkle to an otherwise ordinary meal. If the dessert can be made ahead, then stored in the refrigerator until serving time, so much the better.

Such desserts are Orange Slices in Red Wine and Fresh Apricot Creme Tarts.

The tarts look complicated, but the filling is stirred up quickly from a pudding mix. Use cream instead of milk for extra creaminess. The apricot puree called for in the recipe is made by whisking fresh apricots in the blender. A touch of orange-flavored liqueur and the filling is ready.

The sliced orange dessert is deceiving in its simplicity. Cooked, cooled and chilled in an oven cooking bag, the slices take on all the goodness of a just-right blend of spices.

1½ pounds fresh apricots
1 pint half and half cream
2 packages (3¼ ounces each) cooked-type vanilla pudding mix
2 tablespoons orange-flavored liqueur
8 baked pastry tart shells (each holding ½ cup filling)
½ pint heavy cream, whipped and sweetened

Wash apricots. Halve, pit and puree enough apricots in electric blender or food mill to get 2 cups puree. Chill remaining apricots for garnish. Gradually stir apricot puree and half and half into pudding mix in large saucepan. Bring mixture to a boil, stirring constantly. Remove from heat; stir in liqueur. Spoon apricot filling into tart shells; chill three hours or until serving time.

Just before serving, garnish tarts with remaining apricots

(halved and pitted) and a dollop of whipped cream.

ORANGE SLICES IN RED WINE

6 large navel oranges, peeled and sliced
2 cloves
Stick cinnamon
2 slices tangerine
2 slices lemon
¾ cup sugar
1 cup water
1 cup dry red wine

Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. Place family size (14" x 20") Brown-In-Bag in two-inch deep roasting pan. Fold bag back one-third. Add cloves, cinnamon, tangerine and lemon slices in cheese-cloth; place in bag with sugar, orange slices (seed removed) and liquids. Close bag with twist tie, and shake gently to dissolve sugar. Make six half-inch slits in top of bag. Cook 25 minutes. Let mixture cool at room temperature; chill. Remove spice bag. Serve dessert cold. Makes six servings.

Device aids job hunters

By FRANK MACOMBER
Copley News Service

Nobody enjoys filling out seemingly endless questionnaires to agencies. Yet, if you're job hunting, the questionnaire is part of the employment syndrome.

Well, a lot of that folderol may end before long. Employers will be able to sit prospective employees down at a console and find out firsthand what they can do and how well they can do it.

It will save everybody a lot of time and do a better job of matching up people and tasks, according to space agency technicians who developed the new machine from space technology.

The testing device provides a study of how readily man's mind and muscles respond to everyday demands.

It could be used not only to test job applicant aptitudes, but for traffic law enforcement and highway safety, determination of fatigue or as an aid in learning processes, says Jesse J. Williams, president of the company which produces the psychometric tester. Its nickname is EPIC, acronym for the rather formidable title of Electronic Programmable Interactive Coordinator-Trainer.

"Man's success in today's complex society and even his personal safety may depend on how well he is matched with the equipment and stimuli he encounters at home, at work, in school and on our crowded highways," Williams explains.

EPIC consists of a control console the size of a large electric typewriter, a display panel and four hand-and-foot controls.

The test subject is seated at the controls as an attendant creates a manipulation problem by flashing lights on the display panel. The job applicant — if that's what he is — operates the hand-and-foot levers and tries to match the colored lights with another identical set.

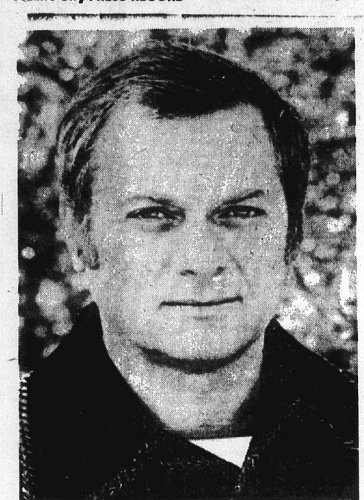

Responses are time-limited, for the combination of lights constantly changes requiring a swift succession of adjustments by the subject.

Williams developed EPIC from National Aeronautics and Space Administration prototype equipment designed in 1965 by the space agency's Langley, Va., Research Center to test astronauts' skills and find out how fatigue would affect their dexterity.

By substituting integrated electronic circuitry for the original mechanical device, Williams has developed a portable machine which can flash a new problem on its lighted display board at intervals of from one to 10 seconds. Williams, whose firm is ready to market EPIC at prices ranging from $5,000 to $30,000, says the unit can be delivered with a cassette recorder, a computer or taping device for record-keeping.

HOLLYWOOD — Tony Curtis' cup runneth over.

He has practically everything a boy from the New York slums could have dreamed of.

Money, an assured place in Hollywood's starriest social scene, a beautiful wife (his third) 20 years younger than he, and six splendid children.

And now, as though fate were putting a cherry upon the sundae of his delights, he's going to have a Broadway show. A David Merrick show at that.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

I graduated from college two years ago and have had four different jobs. So far, I haven't been too enthusiastic about any position I have had.

I am now out of work and have discovered that my job record is against me. What can I do?

Unemployed

Dear Unemployed:

You've been playing the "musical chairs" with your job. When you go on the next interview, aim to project an efficient image. Be able to tell your prospective employer why you want to work for his company. Present a neat, well-groomed appearance.

Answer all questions briefly and allow the interviewer to set the conversational direction.

If you've been able to obtain four jobs in two years, I am certain you can locate a job. When you do, stay put long enough to erase your job-changing image. Good luck.

Traveling dog needs strong box

Q. This summer I will be moving to another state and will be traveling by plane. I want to take my dog, but so many people have told me it was very dangerous for animals to travel this way. I know that they are put in the baggage compartment. Please give me your opinion on this. — B.G., Lanes Park, Ill.

A. Have you ever received a package of valuable glassware that was broken on transit? I'm sure we all have. The problem, usually, is a flimsy and unsurety package.

So, too, with the transport of pets by air. The most important consideration is a strong carrying case — strong enough to withstand the air turbulence and shuffling around of suit cases in the baggage compartment. This precaution will assure a comfortable and safe trip for your pet.

For long trips make sure your pet has had a good drink of water several hours before flight time. Drinking immediately prior to flying may cause stomach cramps and vomiting.

THE WORLD OF MUSIC

Country melodies booming along

By JUDY HUGG
Copley News Service

The overwhelming growth in popularity of country music in the past few years can be attributed, according to Nat Stuckey, RCA recording artist, to two main factors: the upgrading of the class of musicians and the music.

"I think the changes are good because we made country music a little more palatable to many who didn't like the straight three-chord type of thing," said the handsome, blue-eyed baritone.

"There are a lot of younger people showing up at the shows because of it."

"You know for a long time a great many people thought that to play country music you had to use a guitar that was out of tune and sing through your nose. However, many people liked the content and the honesty of the music but it just wasn't the 'in thing' to admit you were a fan of country music, your upgrading has changed all this."

Country music has come a long way, especially where instrumentation is concerned. For at one time anything over three chords was a no-no but now, with the musicianship greatly improved, the road band and studio musicians has custody.

There are two-and-a-half year old Nicholas and month-old Benjamin, beautiful little boys born to the wife Curtis calls "my sweet Leslie."

"She takes such good care of us all," he muses. "She's taken all of us in, made a home for all of us stray creatures."

In an interview a year ago, Curtis expressed concern lest earth's inhabitants commit suicide through overpopulation. He was quoted as saying that, were he starting over, he'd only have two children.

At the time of the interview, he had five children, and now he has six. How does he reconcile Benjamin with his alleged concern?

"I don't think I said I'd only have two children," Tony said, when the quote was thrown back in his face.

"Well, yes, I believe I do remember that interview, so maybe I said it, but don't try to hold me on Friday to what I may have said on Wednesday."

He smiled the famous, boyish Curtis smile which made him a teen-age idol shortly after he left his teen town years.

Of all the countries in which he's worked and/or visited, Curtis feels most at home in Italy.

"It's the country that's most conducive," he began, then broke off the sentence. "The Italians are the most interesting."

"No, I don't really speak Italian. I only speak it when I'm there. I can speak Italian when I'm in Italy but nowhere else."

what to do with a gun if I had one."

An older man passing by was less charitable toward the weedy boppers. "In my day we would have taken a slipper to them," he said.

"What's this all about?" I asked several of the girls.

"It's the WILLIAMS TWINS. ... They're so lovely. ... They make you feel so good when they sing."

They were determined to see them. To touch them, to give them their cards, to get their autographs.

One 13-year-old spoke in rapid accents that didn't register with me as English. I looked at her blankly.

"I came all the way from Scotland to see them," she explained again. "The trip is costing me 28 pounds (about $70). And now they won't even let us in the hotel."

Several girls had gotten through the door but were promptly chased out, it seems.

I told them I had a daughter their age who probably knew all about the Williams twins. Suddenly they realized I was heading for the entrance.

"Take us with you," a girl named Tina begged. "You can say we're your daughters. ... Just one of us then?"

I made my escape by agreeing to take the cards. And, Andy and David, I also promised that if you would send me your autographs (five sets, please) I would forward them to Tina in London.

As for his own writing, says he just doesn't have the time that he once did due to his heavy travel schedule. "I started writing originally when I was with Paula Records," he recalled, "because there was no material available. Naturally none of the writers in Nashville or out on the West Coast wanted to send any of their good songs out to someone they'd never heard of, who recorded for a label they'd never heard of, so it was really a matter of self-defense that I started writing in the first place."

Going back to his first days as a recording artist, Nat was often compared to the late Jim Reeves in style and voice.

"That has always been a combination of flattery and a thorn in my side. We're from the same area of Texas, both baritones and both radio announcers," he said. "I remember when I would audition, people used to say, 'You sing fine but you sound too much like Reeves.' Well, I've always known there's no percentage in sounding like someone else, so I actually started doing things in a high register just to get away from that sound."

While speaking of Reeves, Stuckey said that he and Wayne Jennings were two of the most responsible people in the industry for bringing country music to the forefront.

"Those two have done wonders for our music, just as Hank Williams did," he said. "Country songs are basically sad, you know, and I guess it's just a traditional type thing. But Hank set the pattern because, as I understand he was a very lonely, sad individual. This is something we are also getting away from as you can see by the many up-tempo cuts like 'Don't Pay The Ransom' that I alone have done."

With his new album already high on the charts, Nat is very optimistic about his future and that of country music.

"There's one thing that country music has got and that's the ability to go into a small town of a thousand and play the same thing that we play in the big cities of twenty thousand," he said. "And don't forget it's been said before that no matter what one's mood, there's always a country song to fit it."

EPA demonstration of feedlot controls set

Springfield-The Illinois EPA, which already has bowed to stockmen's protests that proposed feedlot controls were prohibitively costly, is now planning to demonstrate, in the feedlot, methods which are both economically feasible and effective.

A three-day demonstration has been scheduled for the 1973 soil and water conservation show to be held on the Ronald Lawler farm in Jo Daviess county near Stockton. The project, set for Aug. 21, 22 and 23, will be sponsored jointly by the state Environmental Protection Agency, the state Institute for Environmental Quality, the Illinois Beef Industry Council and the Lawler farm.

Last year the Illinois Pollution Control Board considered proposed regulations for feedlot operations, since feedlots are frequent sources of soil and water pollution.

However, the PCB's public hearings revealed that dairy and cattle feeding industries, important segments of the state's agricultural economy, unanimously objected to the proposals as too costly.

The Illinois EPA subsequently asked and obtained a postponement of action on the proposed regulations. This fall, however, the federal EPA is still expected to issue its feedlot regulations.

Noting the EPA's changing stand on the proposed controls, the agency's acting director, Jack M. Marco, said, "Too often, in the past, environmental regulations involving agriculture have been considered before sufficient research and demonstration work has been done.

"We in Illinois are no longer telling farmers simply 'do it,' but rather we're saying 'let's work on this problem together and find solutions.'"

In the demonstration project at Stockton, a system designed by a field engineer of the soil conservation service of the U.S. agriculture department will be used.

It will consist of a settling basin below the feedlot, a drop-box effluent pipe leading to a retention pond, a retention pond with sufficient capacity to hold runoff for the winter season, and a simple pump and spray system for distributing the waste on agricultural land.

After the initial installation, the Institute for Environmental Quality will monitor the project for performance, and visitors to the farm will be allowed to examine it.

"This is the first time that the Illinois environmental program has attempted to show livestock producers how pollution problems can be solved," Marco said.

"We at the Illinois EPA hope the demonstration project at Stockton will help both us and feedlot operators find ways in which many of these pollution problems can be solved."

State environmental officials will be on hand to discuss pollution problems with farmers and livestock producers at the Lawler farm, south and east of Stockton on Ill. Rt. 20, Marco said.

Employee alcoholism is target of state program

A state program to reduce the effects of employee alcoholism is being coordinated by the Illinois Department of Mental Health. The program is directed at employees of government and private industry.

Raymond J. Kelly, department coordinator of Industrial Employee Alcoholism Programs, reports that only 15 of the 70,000 companies operating in Illinois have employee alcoholism programs.

"We have assisted in development of programs to reach 250,000 employees," Kelly said.

He estimates that at least 5 percent of the employed population are alcoholics and that an additional 5 percent are alcohol abusers.

Dorothy Lou Johnson, coordinator of Governmental Employee Alcoholism Programs, said plans are under way to develop an alcoholism program for the 120,000 state government employees.

The Governmental Employees Program eventually will be offered to all county and municipal employee groups in the state, she said.

According to department figures, employee alcoholism costs business and industry in Illinois $820,000,000 annually because of poor job performance, absenteeism, on-the-job accidents and poor management decisions.

The purpose of the program is to call attention to the seriousness of the alcohol problem and to provide assistance in development of rehabilitation programs. The program will be implemented throughout the state by specialists in occupational employee alcoholism programs, located in each of the seven regions of the Department of Mental Health.

James F. Griffin Jr., the department's program policy advisor on alcoholism, said the occupational programs are an important aspect of the state plan for the prevention, treatment and control of alcoholism. He said the Illinois plan "is following a major thrust of the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism in providing programs for the alcoholic employee."
